

I don't know if you remember the files that I had you read but this absolutely ties into the core issue my main build TTS now I'm realizing that the Omni models could have been a solution time and I have dead weights sitting there completely open with access to all the code I don't understand why we don't just utilize a reverse engine skill and build that into a text to speech API or coating those into a literal on device APK with the accessibility SDK and the video game SDK the front end assistant permissions and all that crap I mean we could even pair it with a tiny Gemma that multimodal and operate the piper or something I mean I think yourself outside the box dude
